PREFATORY NOTE.

THE Register commenced in 1764, the year in which the settlement of the Rev. John Thomson as parish minister took place. Mr. Thomson was evidently not a proficient Gaelic scholar, although able to preach in the native tongue. He could not master the spelling of the local popular surnames, but he has preserved in the register a careful and minute phonetic rendering both of the names of persons and of places. His pains to identify persons led him to give the proper and popular cognomens, and in many cases to give the names of the fathers, grandfathers, and great-grandfathers of those seeking to enter the bonds of matrimony, or to have their children baptized.

A perusal of the Register will show how necessary it was to be careful in noting the distinction between persons of the same name in that part of the country. Although the majority of the people bore the name of Mackay, there was a considerable mixture of other names, such as—Morrison, Munros, Macintyres, Sutherlands, Calders, Campbells, Macleods and Macdonalds.

The Register is particularly valuable in that it contains a detailed account of the Baptisms and Marriages of the parish at a time when registers were hardly kept at all. It also throws a light on the social and moral condition of the people. The various classes are very sharply defined. For example, we find as the very lowest a person designated as residing "sometimes with his father, and sometimes with his father-in-law." The next step in the social grade is a person living in a certain place. Then follows "little tenent," "tenent," "farmer," "tacksman," and some of the tacksmen have the prefix of Mr. or addition Esquire, while the parish minister himself seems to be at the top of the social ladder.

In regard to the condition of morals, one cannot but be struck with the frequency, especially at the beginning of the Register, of notices of baptisms of children not born in lawful wedlock. But when one considers the time and the strictness with which Mr. Murdoch Macdonald, Mr. Thomson's predecessor, held sway over the people during his ministry, the matter need not cause great surprise. After Mr. Macdonald's death, Rob Donn, the poet, in an elegy to his late minister, speaks of the extremes in moral laxity to which the people had declined since death had deprived the parish of Mr. Macdonald's presence. The percentage of illegitimate children that were brought to baptism is after all not large, and gradually decreases.

The Register also shows that in the parish there were many at that time who plied a trade of some kind or other. There were masons, carpenters, boat builders, shoemakers, tailors and weavers, and it is also interesting to find that Lord Reay employed a chef in his house at Balnakeil.

The Register of Marriages was equally carefully kept. Early marriages were not greatly approved of in Mr. Thomson's day, and now and again when a young man, probably not much out of his teens, marries, he is put down either as a "simple young lad" or a "single young man"; single in this connection signifying that he had little or no responsibility.

Every leaf of the register is attested by "John Thomson, minister," and up to 1811 is in his own handwriting. After that it is in the handwriting of his successor, the Rev. William Findlater, who, although careful to begin with, did not keep the Register nearly so well as his father-in-law. Mr. Findlater's Register had the disadvantage of not being in the same volume as that of Mr. Thomson. Being of inferior paper, and having lain in some damp place, what remains is in a very poor state of preservation.

Altogether, the Register is one which the Editor is glad to have had the opportunity of transcribing and examining, and he has pleasure also in acknowledging the uniform courtesy of the officials of the Registrar General's Department.
