THE UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND LIMITED ROLL OF HONOUR 1914-1918

THE UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND L ROLL OF HONOUR

GLASGOW: MACLEHOSE, JACKSON AND CO. PUBLISHERS TO THE UNIVERSITY

Foreword

THE Directors have thought it well to prepare a record of the Members of the Staff of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, who took part in the Great War of 1914-1918. To the names have been added brief notes of the ranks and regiments, with the areas and duration of service.

It is only fitting that such a record should contain an account of the unveiling of the Memorial erected in the Head Office, Glasgow, to preserve the memory to all time of those who gave their lives in the service of their Country.

NORMAN L. HIRD, General Manager.

War Memorial

In the presence of a large and representative company on Wednesday, 26th April, 1922, His Grace the Duke of Atholl, K.T., Chairman of the Bank, unveiled the Memorial erected in the Head Office, Glasgow.

Mr. William Hutton, Director, who presided, said: We are met to-day to do honour to the memory of the brave men on the staff of the Union Bank who served and fell in the Great War. The Memorial to be unveiled has been erected to provide a permanent record of these men, and we trust that the form it has taken may be deemed in some small way worthy of the object in view. We have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. T. C. Campbell Mackie as designer of the Memorial, which has a great wealth of symbolism; the actual carving has been carried out by Messrs. Martyn of Cheltenham.

Before calling on our Chairman, himself a distinguished soldier, I would, on behalf of the Board, draw your attention to the splendid part played by the Union Bank Staff in the War. The number of our Staff when the War broke out in 1914 was Eight hundred and forty-two, and of these Eighty Territorials were immediately mobilised. Before the War ended the very large total of Five hundred and eighteen members of the Staff had served in the War in one capacity or another. The number of honours conferred on our men was Fifty-two, including One Distinguished Service Order, Eleven Military Crosses, and Two Distinguished Flying Crosses. A very considerable number of commissions was held, and we had representatives in no fewer than Sixty-three regiments. Unfortunately the number of men who gave their lives was very heavy, and on the Memorial now to be unveiled there appear the names of Eighty-four members of the Staff.

Mr. Norman L. Hird, General Manager, read over the names recorded on the Memorial.

The Duke of Atholl, in performing the ceremony, said: I will now proceed to unveil a Memorial to members of the Staff of the Union Bank of Scotland who during the recent War transferred their services to the Army in order to fight for King and Country, and who died in that service. How splendidly and fearlessly they fought during those terrible years is shown by the fact that Eighty-four men answered their last roll-call, while Fifty-two were specially decorated for gallantry. When we recollect the type of man who is employed by the Union Bank of Scotland, we can realise the gain, and then the loss, that they were to our fighting forces, the almost irreparable gap that they have left in our Staff, and the loss to our Country of some of its finest and most intelligent men. I have heard it said that some of the greatest pioneers of civilisation are our commercial travellers. Equally it may be said that the great British banks and their Staffs have done more to stabilise that civilisation and bring about commerce, prosperity, and a proper spirit of thrift, than any other body in the world. Wherever we go throughout the world, wherever there is banking, we find Scotsmen connected with the banking world, respected not only for their business ability, but for the high sense of duty and decent Christian living that they bring with them. Many of these lads who fell might have had brilliant futures before them, and, trained in this country, would probably have gone abroad and continued those old traditions. Their loss may therefore be There is, I fear, no man or woman looked upon as world-wide. in this building who has not had to mourn the loss during the War of one very dear to them, but we have a great compensation in feeling that those who have passed on were wanted, and were fighting, for as great a cause as man ever fought for, while their spirit was such that they themselves would not have had it otherwise. We can memorialise them well by tablets such as We can build great monuments to the memory of those who fell, but these are material monuments fashioned by the hand of man. The real lasting memorial they have built themselves by the aid of God, for they have set up an ethical monument of the spirit of sacrifice, loyalty, and gallantry that will ever maintain their names hallowed in the history of their country. It is for us to keep that memory untarnished and fresh, to tell of it to our children, and for our children to tell it to their children, and if we fail in that splendid spirit of understanding that we saw amongst all sections of the people during the Great War, and if we work for ourselves alone, and not for the community at large, the sacrifice of those who lost their life will indeed have been in vain, and we shall be unworthy of the great heritage that they have left us. I now unveil this Memorial to the glory of God and to the memory of those Eighty-four men who fell in the cause of honour, liberty and country.

The Rev. John White, D.D., of the Barony, dedicated the Memorial and pronounced the Benediction.

The Memorial, placed in the vestibule of the Head Office, in Glasgow, is designed by Mr. T. C. Campbell Mackie, Master of Design in the Glasgow School of Art. The significance of the symbols is as follows: Round the three panels containing the names of those who made the supreme sacrifice grow the Thorns of War, whilst below are represented the Dogs of War, grim beasts let loose upon mankind. On either hand amidst the thorns is the sheathed sword, symbolical of the achievement of Peace through Valour and Might of Arms. On the lesser growth of the thorns above grow the Sour Apples of Discord, implying that there are always about us the elements of strife. On the centre styles grow the Lilies of Peace, they are rooted deep amongst the gnarled tentacles of War, whilst the topmost buds just touch the fringe of the Thorns of War above. Some might possibly interpret this part of the design as an implication that Peace is merely an interlude 'twixt War and War—the designer prefers rather that it should stand for the hope that Peace is reaching up to overgrow the possibility of War in the future. Above the dedication are put, as a crown to the whole, the age-long symbols for the soul and eternal life—the Peacock and the Vine. On the panels, inlaid in ebony, are further significant details—the Oak for constancy, etc. Over each of the three panels, which are recessed, the fretted canopies show the Rose, the Thistle, and the Shamrock.

MacDougall, Peter A., Lerwick.

Lieutenant, Artists Rifles, Royal Air Force, 1916-1919. France. Wounded, October 1917, March 1918. Awarded Military Cross, May 1918. "He always showed great initiative and skill in attacking enemy aircraft, and drove down or destroyed several enemy machines. On one occasion while on patrol, he encountered three enemy two-seater machines, and, though his engine was giving trouble, he attacked them single-handed and drove one of them down out of control, having shot the observer. On another occasion, after driving down an enemy machine, he attacked and silenced a battery of six guns which were firing on our machines. His example of pluck and determination was of the utmost value to his squadron."

RICHARDSON, ROBERT L. T., Leith.

Captain, Cameron Highlanders, Royal Scots, 1914-1919.

France. Awarded Military Cross, June 1919, for "Conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst in charge of working parties in forward areas. This officer was in charge of a working party detailed to construct a trench system, which it was imperative should be completed quickly. The work took six hours, during which time the party was subjected to heavy shell fire, and it was largely due to this officer's coolness, disregard of danger and the encouragement he gave to his men, that the work was completed in time. This officer has at all times shown a good example to the subalterns and other ranks of his company."
